1. EARL SOURFACE: "By my halldome! Thou SHALT marry the Duke of Giltrocks! Ods bodkins! Darest thou defy my commands! S'death! There is the Earl at the gates now. Alonzo! Ser! Go, let him in. Girl, thou shalt accept the Duke this day."

2. ALONZO: "Gods! All is lost! I can see no way to rid fair Isabel this day of the importunities of the Duke!"
HAL THE HALBERDIER: "Ods bloody youngster! Why this wall of woe! You haven't got a chew of turkerback about you, have you?"

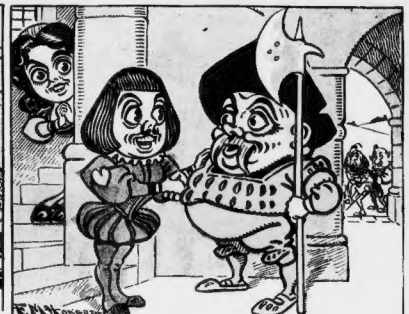

3. ALONZO: "No, but here is one of the old man's best cigars. 'S'fide! Hal, what shall I do! Here comes the Duke, and the old man says Mistress Isabel MUST accept him. Now, on how, can I get rid of him?"
HAL THE HALBERDIER: "Say nothin', me boy. Just give me the wink when the bloke is directly behind me. I'll fix him."

4. HAL THE HALBERDIER: "All right, son. I'll go and meet the Duke at the portal and escort him into the presence of fair Mistress Isabel with all the dignity and honor due such exalted personage!"
DUKE OF GILTROCKS: "Yeow! Ouch! Ods death! I'm killed! I'm assassinated!"

5. HAL THE HALBERDIER: "Oh, may your grace accept my most humble apologies. Little did I think you were so close at hand!"
ALONZO: "Yes, Duke, it was all a mistake!"
DUKE OF GILTROCKS: "Ods wounds! My pate is cracked! Gods! Such a bump!"
EARL SOURFACE: "St. George and the Dragon! He's in trouble, again!"

6. ALONZO: "Many thanks, old man, many thanks!"
ISABEL: "Yes, thank you, dear old Hal!"
HAL THE HALBERDIER: "Don't mention it! You know where I live, call on me again!"
EARL SOURFACE: "Way not stay and press thy suit, noble Duke?"
DUKE OF GILTROCKS: "Some other day. My head is hurting!"

How Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish was Punished.

The Surprising Story of Jealousy and Revenge of Four Newport Society Leaders which Precipitated the Recent Life Insurance Scandals and Has Just Dragged Stuyvesant Fish out of the Presidency of the Illinois Central Railroad.

MR. STUYVESANT FISH

"The truth is that it was the gloved hand of a Newport society leader that, metaphorically, took Mr. Jimmy Hyde by the ear and, later on, shook President Fish out of his influential position."

JOHN THE BAPTIST'S head was cut off by command of King Herod—but it was done to please Salome, the King's step-daughter. The bloody seven years' war was declared by King Louis XIV. of France, but the real cause of that war was the vindictive resentment of Madame de Pompadour at being called "Queen Without the Crown" by Frederick the Great.

And it was the resentful indignation, pique and jealousy of certain conspicuous women of the fashionable "set" which precipitated the tremendous life insurance scandals of the past year, and only a few weeks ago unseated the distinguished president of the Illinois Central Railroad. These women did not, to be sure, appear on the witness stand in the recent financial investigations, nor did they sit in the directors' meeting of the railroad. But the truth is that it was the gloved hand of a Newport society leader that, metaphorically, took Mr. Jimmy Hyde by the ear and, later on, shook President Fish out of his influential position.

This remarkable society war which has led to such surprising results began with the famous fancy dress Louis Quinze ball given by young James H. Hyde, a ball which, in one way and another, has led to more far-reaching consequences than any other social entertainment ever given in the United States. One of the distinguished matrons invited to that ball was Mrs. Edward H. Harriman, and she, like other representative New York society women, was deeply angered by the precedence accorded to the French actress, Madame Rejane, by young Mr. Hyde. So deep was her anger that she incited her husband to pursue Mr. Hyde until he had destroyed his control of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, driven him from the Union Pacific Railroad directorate, and ruined his entire financial position.

But not only in this affair was Mr. Harriman's staid struggle for the control of the railroad and financial system of this country actually affected by women's social aspirations. The pursuit of his goal led him later into a fight for the control of the Illinois Central Railroad, which would link together his vast transcontinental lines. To capture this railroad he had to depose Stuyvesant Fish, its president for twenty years. Two votes were needed to assure him a secure majority against Fish, and those were the votes of Colonel John Jacob Astor and Cornelius Vanderbilt. It happened that their wives were incensed by the pretensions of Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish—the giver of monkey luncheons and freak entertainments—to assume the leadership of New York society in succession to Mrs. Astor. They assumed the adherence of their husbands to the Harriman forces.

It is the out, and an eternally interesting story of the personal charms, the political and rivalries of women directing the actions of simple men by devices and crafty methods from behind the scenes. It recalls that greatest of all epics, the Siege of Troy, the wanderings of Aeneas and the creation of the Roman Empire—all arose from the aspiration cast upon the beauty of Juno. Certainly the railroad system of the United States is not so small a thing to be comprised in the whole empire of the ancient world. If you prefer a less heroic comparison, you may take the case of the Seven Years' War, which involved all Europe in bloodshed, because Frederick the Great had rudely described Madame de Pompadour as "Petite L." as already mentioned.

Little did young Mr. Hyde dream of the momentous sequence of events that he was precipitating when he planned his celebrated fancy dress ball. He was then regarded with admiration as a youth who wore the most elaborate whiskers and the most gorgeous socks and waistcoats in New York, and at the same time conducted an insurance company with great profit to himself. He innocently rewarded the giving of fancy dress balls and Arabian Nights' entertainments at the expense of the Equitable Society as of very great benefit to that institution.

The entertainment opened with a charming eighteenth century dance, executed by young society girls dressed "à la Camargo," with their partners costumed as Pierrots. This was followed by a ballet performed by Heri Corrie's corps from the Metropolitan Opera House. After this came a comedy entitled "Entre Deux Portes," acted by Madame Rejane and her company. The author had very cleverly, as he thought, written the play around Mr. Hyde's party, and the characters in the piece were all supposed to be returning from the very fête where the piece was acted. Needless to say, he missed the deepest significance of it all. After the comedy the trumpets sounded, and on the floor beneath a supper was served for the six hundred guests. The supper room had been transformed into a representation of a beautiful Versailles garden, with rustic chairs, arbors, rose-colored lights, trellises, vines and turf. The servants were in costumes of the period—white wigs, red and blue uniforms and white silk stockings.

Now occurred the fatal deed. Young Mr. Hyde, with a magnificent air, wearing knee breeches and his most exquisite stockings, led Madame Rejane, the actress, to the place of honor, on his right hand, at the head of the supper table. Among the dignified matrons who were forced to give place to the actress was Mrs. Edward H. Harriman. Her brow was torn with mortification, indignation and resentment, which she was totally unable to express, at the time, but which, for that reason, she vented with all the more vigor when she had an opportunity to do so. The other women guests included Astors, Vanderbilts, Burdons, Livingstons, Whitehouses, Isaacs, Rivers and others bearing the most famous names in Knickerbocker society. Of the greatest importance was the presence there of Madame Waddington, the American wife of a former French Ambassador to England, and of Mrs. William Reid, the wife of a former American Ambassador to France. In the light of their official experience and dignity they approached to the full the bitter humiliation of having to give place to a play actress.

It is said that the bitter strictures of Madame Waddington upon the affair first claimed the attention of officials of the Equitable who were not present to this and other extravaganzas of young Mr. Hyde, and led to the action of President Alexander, who exposed the mis-

Just Shut My Eye and Puled the Trigger

Yet Five Bullets Fired by Brave Little Ethel Smith Reached the Brain of the Human Brute

Who Battered in the Door, and, Armed With Club and a Long Knife, Threatened Death to All the House.

PRETTY little Ethel Smith is the fifteen-year-old heroine of every village and town within a score of miles of Providence, Rhode Island.

With her father's revolver she first five shots into the body of Ebenezer Briggs, killing him instantly, but the law will never touch her. The Council applauded her action. Police, lawyers and judges, who knew the circumstances, are her friends and champions.

This is because the brave little girl did not murder a man—she merely killed a human brute who was savagely beating the lives of an unprotected woman and children.

Ethel Smith is a quiet girl, modest and shy to the point of timidity. Yet she had the courage to stand waiting in the hall of her father's farm house while the human brute was smashing down the door with a club and yelling:

"I'll cut the hearts out of every one in the house!"

And when the brute's head appeared through the splintered panel she had the courage to level her father's revolver within a yard of his face and stretch him dead at her feet with five bullets through his head, while two grown women and three children covered behind closed doors.

"How could you be so brave?" the neighbors asked her after the mother had recovered from her shock and she was back home again.

"I just shot my eyes and pulled the trigger," she answered. "I did not know any other way."

She afterward when the chief of police came and to her he was dead.

When the day of the tragedy was made public Miss Smith was at the home of the Chief of Police Hiram Kimball, who, instead of removing her to the police station, gave her into the care of his wife and saw that she was a happy Thanksgiving dinner, which the excitement prevented her from enjoying at home.

A Guest of the Chief of Police. She spent the night at her father's home and the next morning the formality of arranging for her before Judge Henry A. Palmer in the Eighth district court at Cranston was carried out, but a score of little spectators of the town, representing $500,000, were on hand to bid her off.

Chief Kimball, having made the charge manager, as number is not believed in Rhode Island.

The girl was taken back to her home by her father, who, when Briggs fell dead, entered the door at which Briggs fell dead and saw into the kitchen to gather in her arms two of her four pet cats, her chief companions since the death of her mother several months ago.

Briggs was about fifty years old and had served time for assaulting his first wife, who obtained a divorce. He had been drunk and ugly for some time, and his second wife had left him a week before the tragedy, who had returned to pack up her household effects, which were in a house on the Smith house, and was invited by Palmer Smith to remain over Thanksgiving.

Briggs heard of her presence and returned from Narragansett, and started for the farm house, beating bushes against everybody there.

He entered the house, made a disturbance and was expected by William Smith, the colored man of all work about the place.

Then he became belligerent, and Miss Smith, who was alone in the house with her children, sent William to summon police assistance.

Called Kimball could be located. When that official drove in all night to the Smith home it was too late, as Briggs was dead.

When Briggs was "smashed the house the next time Mrs. Briggs was terribly scared," said Ethel Smith.

Let him in because if we did not he would kill her and the children. After seeing her our only man for the police, we heard three of the doors and windows as best we could and prayed for help to come.

"Briggs was in a fever mood, and threatened to kill us all unless I opened the door. Mrs. Briggs ran into the back room with her children, and I knew it would depend upon me to keep him out."

He had unlocked the door and began to push it open when I just shot my eyes and stretched him dead at her feet with five bullets through his head, while two grown women and three children covered behind closed doors.

"I did not want to kill him, but people have told me that I did exactly right. I knew I believed at the time that he would kill us all if I didn't keep him out of the house."

The empty shells of the revolver showed that the girl must have pressed the trigger a dozen and once after she emptied the five bullets into Briggs's head. The first shot struck him in the neck, another went through his right chest, two entered the forehead about the center, and the fifth the top of his head, as he was falling. He died without a groan. Any one of the last three shots were necessarily fatal, physicians said.

Miss Smith was quite excited when Chief Kimball took her away.

"I want to go home," she cried. "I want my own. Oh, I didn't mean to kill the man. I'm so sorry he is dead!" she cried.

At the inquest Briggs's wife, Hallelujah, the head; Mary Manuel, the colored cook; Leander Smith, father of the boy, and Joseph Smith, the ten-year-old daughter of Mrs. Briggs by her first husband, were among the witnesses.

Miss Smith had gone to a neighbors to spend the afternoon the day of the tragedy and knew nothing of the trouble.

Mrs. Briggs said: "Ethel did exactly right. It was his life or ours. I am sorry he is dead, but it is better so. I think her daughter, Jennie, was the star witness for the coroner and the Smiths."

"Thanksgiving morning Mr. Briggs came to the house," she said, "and told us that he was going to the kitchen and would have vengeance to maintain."

Over and over again she will see the man's face thrust through the broken door-panel, will feel again the pressure of her hands on the revolver trigger, will hear the five shots ringing out—each seeming to say to her:

"You killed a man, Ethel Smith. You took the life of a fellow creature. Already these disturbing thoughts haunt her, and her parents are aware that if she were less sturdy, wholesome and available, they might seriously affect her health. So all who know her are surrounding her

Briggs was in a fever mood and threatened to kill us all unless I opened the door. Mrs. Briggs ran into the back room with her children, and I knew it would depend upon me to keep him out.

I put a chair under the knob of the front door, and when Briggs said he would cut our hearts out, I took the pistol down from a shelf in the hall closet, where we kept it to frighten away chicken thieves.

The man got a big stick of wood from a pile in the yard, and when I wouldn't open the door he cut away the wire screen of the outside door and smashed in the panel to my right.

He had already showed a butcher knife with which he said he would kill us all, sure. Then he put his arm through the hole he had made in the door, pushed the chair away and began to unlock the door. I told him that if he didn't go away at once I would shoot, but he only swore.

He had unlocked the door and began to push it open when I just shot my eyes and stretched him dead at her feet with five bullets through his head, while two grown women and three children covered behind closed doors.

"The revolver was of the self-loading variety, and, as she grasped the trigger, the revolver was discharged rapidly five times. So close were the shots together that it seemed as if they were one shot. Briggs fell dead at her feet with five bullets through his head, while two grown women and three children covered behind closed doors."

How a Graceful Girl Walks.

DON'T drag your feet or fling them, or lag or stride. Learn to glide into a room gracefully. It is impossible for a woman to be awkward in her walk if she walks straight and keeps her feet out given one graceful stride.

Learn also how to be modest. Don't sit with your clothes around your head. Don't sit on the ragged side of a chair. When you walk consider the style of your dress. If you are dragging a train don't forget it. The longer and heavier the gown the slower you must walk. And that, last, and at all times, be dignified. As a graceful walk will reveal the most elegant gown that the dressmaker's art can devise.

CHAPTER XXXIX

ONE day ma decided to move to the country, and we didn't waste much time in packing up and moving. I tell you. Oh, my! I was tickled. I wanted room. I wanted grass and trees and fields; so did Tige.

When we moved into our new house we found there were mice there ahead of us. Pa put a whole lot of mouse traps around the house to try and catch them.

The very next morning I found a mouse in one of the traps, and he was the cutest little thing I ever saw, with bright little eyes that watched every move I made. I couldn't have harmed him for anything; neither could Tige. I fed him and played with him all day, and he grew very tame.

We didn't know how to dispose of him, until three or four days had gone by and ma insisted that we should do something with him. She said she'd leave it to me.

I had made friends already with all the boys and girls in our neighborhood, so I held a consultation with them. Mary Jane and her mother were with us, as Mary Jane's mother was helping ma.

Well, after a long conference we came to a decision, and this is what it was. We would put up a basket of luncheon for the mouse, and then we would leave him in the fields.

When the luncheon was ready we all went out into the fields, far away from home. We put the luncheon in the tall grass, then we shook the mouse out of the trap. But he was too quick for us; he ran up a little girl's coat and hid in her pocket. We dug him out and dropped him on the ground, and then he ran back into the trap. We didn't know what to do. We dumped him out again, and we all took to our heels, and ran with all our mights. Poor little mouse! As I looked back over my shoulder I could see him coming as hard as he could run. We were too fast for him though, and he couldn't catch us

We got away from him, and there he was, out in the wild fields alone. We all felt very sorry. It was a mean trick to run away from a poor little mouse. We all prayed for him that night, and for a long time we would go out in the fields and leave morsels of food so he might find them and not go hungry.

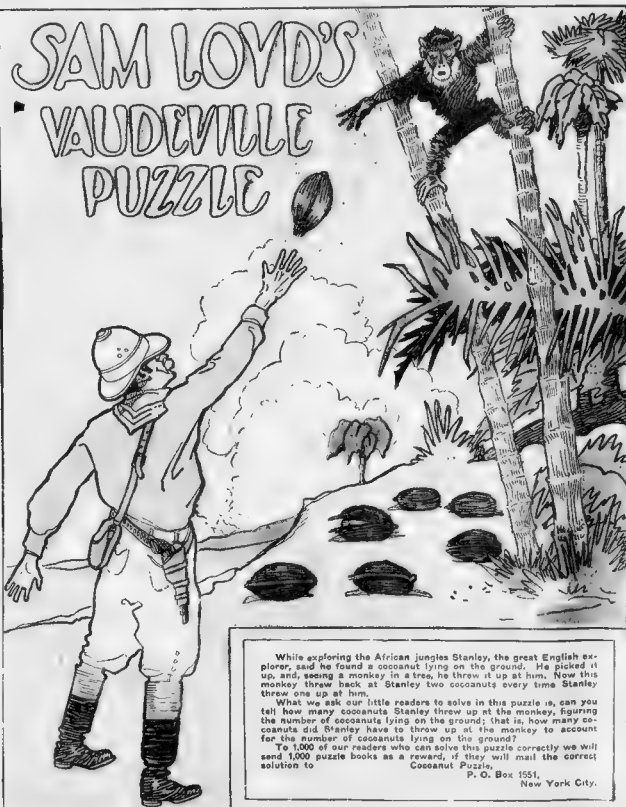

But what do you think? A few days after that we found a mouse in one of our traps, and it was our same little tame mouse. He seemed overjoyed to be back with us again. We got one of those little cages with a wheel to it like you have seen squirrels in and put him into it. There he still lives, a nappy and contented little mouse.

SAM LOYD'S VAUDEVILLE PUZZLE

While exploring the African jungles Stanley, the great English explorer, said he found a coconut lying on the ground. He picked it up, and seeing a monkey in a tree, he threw it up at him. Now this monkey threw back at Stanley two coconuts every time Stanley threw one up at him.

What we ask our little readers to solve in this puzzle is, can you tell how many coconuts Stanley threw up at the monkey, figuring the number of coconuts lying on the ground; that is, how many coconuts did Stanley have to throw up at the monkey to account for the number of coconuts lying on the ground?

To 1,000 of our readers who can solve this puzzle correctly we will send 1,000 puzzle books as a reward, if they will mail the correct solution to

A Dainty Guimpe Waist, That Can Be Made at Home by the Home Dressmaker.

GUIMPE waists continue to be among the leading favorites this winter, and are shown to advantage when worn over a lace blouse or a dainty silk slip.

The waist shown in the accompanying illustration is particularly smart, and has a charm of originality as well as grace. This model was developed in white tulle, the slashed front and back displaying an under blouse of cluny lace.

The sleeve caps are of graceful shape and are trimmed to correspond with the waist by straps of the silk, held in place by tiny silk-covered buttons.

Made up in peau de seie or liberty satin in black, white or any of the delicate colors, the design would be an exquisite creation. For 36-inch bust measure 2 1/2 yards of 27-inch material will be required.

The patterns for this guimpe waist have been cut to sizes for 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure and will be sent post paid by return mail for ten cents. Fill in the blank below and mail with ten cents in silver or stamps to BOSTON AMERICAN, SUNDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1906.

FIGHT ON

READERS, this is our last Sunday talk for the year Nineteen Hundred and Six. When we meet on this page next week a new year will have begun. Let us talk about that new year and plan for it together, as we have done at the end of other years.

As we look ahead, a year seems long. It would be long if WE PUT OUR BEST INTO IT.

But when we look back, how short the year is! Its days have ticked by, like the ticking of the second hand on the watch. Winter, Spring, Summer, Autumn have gone in a flash. In two days another year begins with its Winter, Spring, Summer and Autumn.

A few more or a few less of these years, and our story is told. We go back into the earth, and the Winters and the Summers will pass, but others will do the work; OUR CHANCE WILL BE GONE FOREVER.

The human being is dull-minded, in a bad rut, who sees the new year approach without an earnest desire to make it THE BEST YEAR, without a determination to make AND TO KEEP resolutions worthy of a human being.

Never be ashamed of your tendency to resolve upon better things, and never belittle the tendency in others.

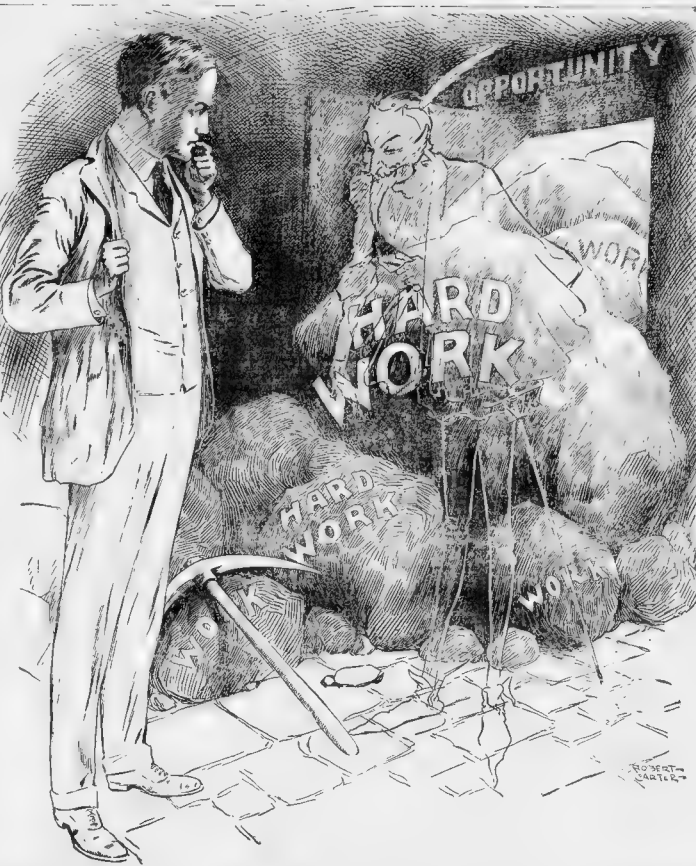

Each life is a long series of efforts and of many failures. On these failures we build up what little success we may have. The best of us die disappointed in ourselves. The worst of us are not much worse than the best of us, considering opportunity, surroundings and other conditions.

What shall we resolve for the year 1907? It depends upon our age, upon our past, upon THE SECRET WHICH EACH HEART KNOWS BEST.

All of us should struggle, first of all, FOR SELF CONTROL. We must master OURSELVES before we can master destiny. Help others, be of use. We must RECOGNIZE our faults before we can correct them. Each man should think carefully WHAT HE CAN DO, and try to do that. He should not try TOO MUCH, for scattered effort ends too often in defeat.

One thing each of us can do and should do. We should make up our minds to try to use OUR TIME WISELY and energetically. Time is all that we have in this world. The minute with its sixty seconds, the hour, with its sixty minutes, the day, the year, a few YEARS OF EFFORT, that is all we have. Everything must be done in those ticking seconds. And every hour to the man of force should have its result in real work, OR IN WHOLESOME, WELL-PLANNED RELAXATION.

Let us make up our minds to RESPECT TIME, our only possession. Let us determine to use THIS HOUR, which is passing. For that is our only hour, THE HOUR IN WHICH WE LIVE. Let us dream of the future as much as we please and mourn for the past as much as we please. BUT LET US WORK IN THE IMMEDIATE HOUR THAT BELONGS TO US.

There is not a man who does not know bitter failure in his own mind, no matter what the world may give him credit for.

No man is doing as well as HE MIGHT DO, or as well as he ought to do. Each added year of age gives greater mental force, if the brain is decently cared for. Every one of us, successful or otherwise, should be DISSATISFIED WITH HIMSELF, and determine to make this next year the BEST year. The first thing is to think less of ourselves and our own selfish comfort and more of what we owe to the world, to our fathers and mothers.

The man who does not do HIS BEST is unworthy. And every man knows for himself how far he comes from doing his best.

The man with whose life drink interferes should again try and try more earnestly than ever to conquer that curse. He should remember that the strength to conquer must come from within himself, though encouragement from friends may help. He should remember THAT THERE IS NO SUCH THING AS FAILURE WHEN A MAN REALLY MEANS TO WIN. He should say to himself: "I AM GOING TO STOP." But he shouldn't look at the dreary years ahead. He should look at each day, EACH HOUR, and say to himself: "THIS HOUR I will not drink, whatever I may do hereafter; THIS DAY I will not drink, whatever I may do hereafter."

Let him have each hour and each day sufficient unto itself. Let him ENJOY EVERY VICTORY OF EVERY HOUR. He will take pride in his conquest from hour to hour, from day to day, and WIN in the end.

The man who drinks should make a good and strong resolution. But the man WHO JUDGES HARSHLY THE OTHER MAN WHO DRINKS SHOULD ALSO MAKE GOOD RESOLUTIONS. There are perfectly sober men, teetotallers even, more in need of reform than any drunkard. It is a man's duty to do HIS BEST. The man cursed with a taste for drink may do HIS best if he merely stops drinking. The man blessed with freedom from that curse should not be proud, should not puff himself with conceit. HE SHOULD DETERMINE TO TAKE A KIND VIEW OF THOSE LESS FORTUNATE, to help them. And incidentally to drive himself to some effort worthy of a man.

A great asset in success is HEALTH. Each of us should determine as a matter of duty to make health a study in the coming year. Careful eating, great regularity in eating and in sleep, great attention to the welfare of the body—nothing could be more important.

The mind, to work well, must be in a good working body. How foolish the man who gets the best kind of chauffeur to care for his perfectly simple, commonplace automobile engine and never gives one thought to THE INCALCULABLY COMPLICATED ENGINE IN HIS OWN BODY, UPON WHICH HIS WELFARE DEPENDS.

Take care of your HEALTH this year, for one thing.

All of us must practice self-denial. We must even do without those pleasures that we might harmlessly enjoy, if men and the world were nearer perfection. The time WILL come when men shall have discovered the secret of organizing themselves in society. The day WILL come when men will live in accordance with the attractions that NATURE HAS PLACED WITHIN THEM FOR THEIR GUIDANCE.

But that time has not come yet. Each of us must deny himself, must think of what he ought to do, and not WHAT HE WANTS TO DO. The man who enjoys life thoroughly is not often the man that gets the best work out of himself. Our lives must be dull IN ORDER THAT WE MAY FIND OUR KEENEST INTEREST IN OUR WORK.

Your health must not be sacrificed to ANYTHING, not even to your important work. For that work itself depends upon the health. But to your important work you should sacrifice everything except YOUR HEALTH, and except, of course, the welfare of others that you have no right to sacrifice under any conditions.

Our advice as to self-denial is intended especially for the young men and the young women. They are the ones that owe most to the world, and that should try hardest to get the best work out of themselves. They should work hard in the passing day with their minds on the future.

They should say to themselves: "This day does not count, the pleasure of this hour does not count. I am working to make the FUTURE amount to something. I am going to be one of those who have a right to enjoy old age, a right to ask for the respect due to the man who at least tried."

As to the older men and women, those nearing the end of life, we have only to hope that the younger generation rising will show them the respect and affection that is due to the old, due to those that have done the work in the years past. We wish to the old a happy year, and as many other years as may be blessed with health. We submit to them respectfully for their comfort the beautiful words that Benjamin Franklin addressed to his friend, Hugh Roberts: "We loved and still love one another; we are grown gray together, and yet it is too early to part. Let us sit till the evening of life is spent. The last hours are always the most joyous. When we can stay no longer, it is time enough then to bid each other good night, separate and go quietly to bed."

Wolf's White Sale

A sale that presents more and better goods for less money than you ever saw before. It's really wonderful when you consider the steadily advancing price of cottons today how such garments as are here offered can be made and sold for the insignificant prices that we're asking.

Each garment is new, perfect and attractive from every point—exactly the same qualities as we carry in stock the year round—and not to be confounded with those that are made solely for sale purposes.

Too busy

getting ready to bring out the first issue of "The Boston Daily Tribune" Tuesday morning to write an advertisement today. Letters and telegrams to the number of more than one thousand a day have been received at my office every day since Christmas.

The paid-in-advance mail subscription list of "The Boston Daily Tribune," I sincerely believe, actually exceeds at this minute the subscription list of any financial newspaper printed in the United States.

The subscriptions have been coming in all week from everywhere. It has been a tremendous surprise to me. I did not know the interest was so widespread. With the very first issue "The Boston Daily Tribune" will have a national circulation.

As to the character and policy of the paper I only have time today to reaffirm all I have heretofore said. That it will be different and a vast improvement over the old-line dry-rot financial newspapers goes without saying. It will make of finance a living, burning issue.

Subscription price $8 per year, $4 for six months, or 75 cents per month. This schedule goes into effect Tuesday. I have, however, made a special concession in price of $5 per year or $1 for two months to all who subscribe before the appearance of the first issue. Out of town subscribers will be served promptly by mail. Subscribers in Greater Boston will be served through their regular newsdealer. Advertising rates on application either in person or by telephone Main 486 or Fort Hill 990.

AMERICA IS MONEY MAD —GIBBONS.

Indictment of Perkins and Fairchild Gives Point to Signed Article.

CORPORATE GREED IS SCORED BY CARDINAL

"Honor in Business Life" Bare Dishonesty of Giant Combines.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—The indictment of George W. Perkins and Charles F. Fairchild for irregularities in the New York Life Insurance Company gives unusual point to a signed article in Cardinal Gibbons under the title of "Honor in Business Life," which is printed in Van Norden's Magazine, published to-day.

By Cardinal Gibbons. Business life in this day is all wrong. We are running the risk of carrying our enthusiasm for order, things too far past the point when ambition to succeed and industry are still compatible with a certain reasonable enjoyment of the things of this life that are good and pleasant.

Corporation Dishonesty. Some of the most serious evils which will be known to the public are the and the dishonesty of the corporation. The dishonesty of the corporation is the most serious of the evils which will be known to the public.

Ignore Claim of Justice. When the law is broken, it is broken. It is not a matter of justice or injustice. It is a matter of fact. The law is broken, and it is broken. It is not a matter of justice or injustice. It is a matter of fact.

1896 BIG YEAR FOR THE AUTO INDUSTRY IN AMERICA.

Remarkable Growth of Interest in Horseless Vehicles the Country Over

COMING SEASON HAS BRIGHT PROSPECTS

BY J. C. KERRISON.

With the close of the year 1906, the automobile industry in America has reached a point of development that is almost unparalleled in the history of any other industry. The year has been a year of remarkable growth of interest in horseless vehicles throughout the country.

A year ago the automobile was a novelty, a curiosity, a thing of the future. Now it is a part of the everyday life of the people. It is no longer a luxury, but a necessity. It is no longer a thing of the future, but a thing of the present.

Local Trade Changes.

The local trade in automobiles has been very active during the year. There has been a steady increase in the number of automobiles sold, and the prices have remained very low. This is due to the fact that the automobile is now a necessity, and not a luxury.

We Lead in Racing.

The American automobile industry has led the world in racing. This is due to the fact that the American automobile is the most powerful and the most reliable. It is also the most comfortable and the most economical.

White Mountain Climbs.

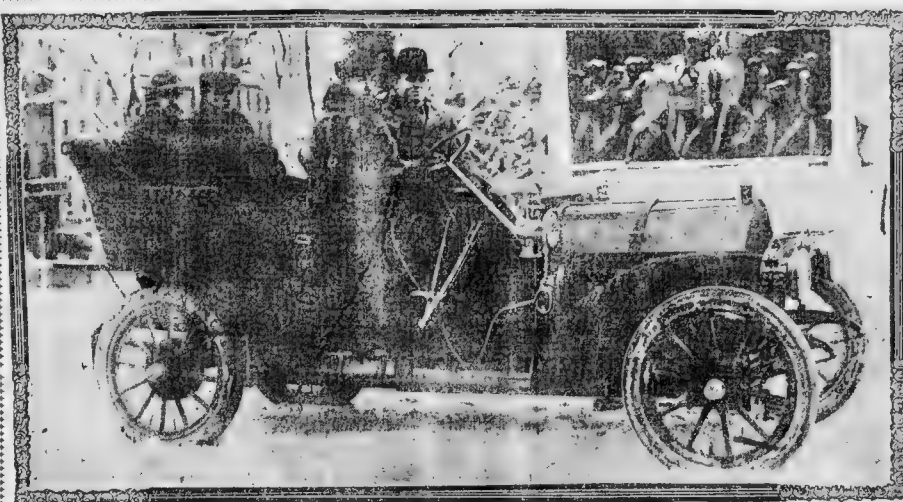

The White Mountain Club has been very successful in its efforts to promote the automobile industry. It has been very successful in its efforts to promote the automobile industry.

IF YOU HAVE ANY DOUBT

About your advertising paying arrange a series of keyed ads. and you will quickly learn the truth. Circulation is the only element that can be depended upon to make advertising profitable. Advertisers who are found regularly in the papers of large circulation are those who have learned their value through test ads. The AMERICAN has the largest circulation in New England (daily and Sunday). "A word to the wise is sufficient."

WHERE PIANOS ARE SACRIFICED

You, the people who have helped us in our big fight with the Piano Trust—You who have not listened to the emissaries of the Trust, but who have investigated for yourselves and have found that we had been telling you the truth, the whole truth, about Trust pianos, and the fictitious values attached to them—We thank all of our customers who, after having bought high-grade pianos from us, sent their friends here to get the same kind of a bargain. We assure our friends that our Christmas sale was a big success, and that we will continue our fight with the Piano Trust. You who have waited until after Christmas for a piano bargain will have your heart made glad if you run up here this week.

Pianos Given Away Free To Young People

Do you know of a boy or girl who is musically inclined who would like to own a piano, but who cannot afford one? We are going to give to such young people some splendid square pianos which we have taken as part payment. These pianos are given free, absolutely free. The pianos are of the finest makes and in good condition. Just the pianos for beginners. If you are interested in the education of some young person who is deserving, come in with them at once. About 50 pianos, including the following makes, given away: Chickering, Hallet & Davis, Emerson, Knabe, Ivers & Pond, Newhall, Wm. Bourne, McPhail and other well-known fine makes.
